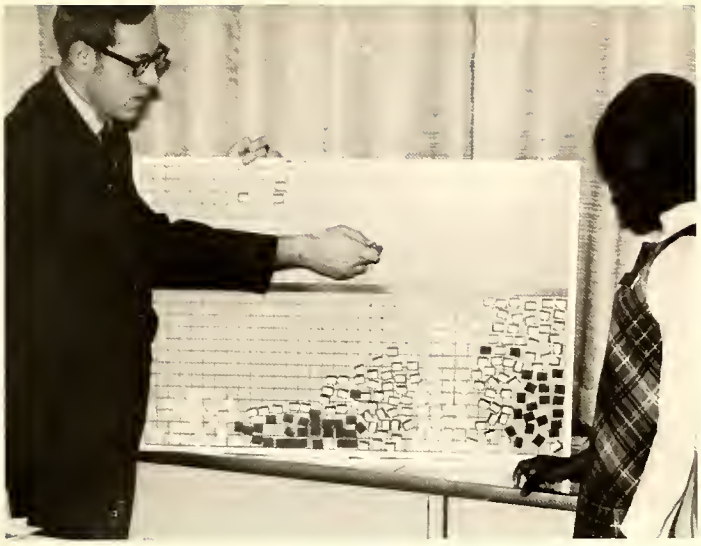
Administration Guides Students . . .

Mr. Richardson gives advice and discusses problems with a Fairfield student.

Mr. Richardson, the principal of Fairfield has a very busy schedule. It is up to him to see that Fairfield stays on its track and keeps running smoothly, always moving forward. But no matter how busy Mr. Richardson is, he can always find time to sit down and talk things over with students.

The Administration, while taking a needed break for lunch, talk of the morning's events.

Fairfield's Administration is helping to mold future citizens by teaching Spartans the necessities of life along with the many other subjects. They teach students to be aware and show that learning can be fun and will prove useful when Spartans must earn a living in the future.



Mr. Koos is shown helping a Spartan to "see the light."

Mr. Koos assists Mr. Richardson by taking care of an endless number of duties and helping maintain stability at Fairfield.

Counselors Assist with Problems . . .

Fairfield counselors assist new students in learning the ropes at Fairfield. They discuss problems, grades and anything else that comes up with students. At the same time keeping up with all the paper work and all their other chores.

Mr. Andrews, carefully reading over a report.

Mrs. Tharp spends a large amount of time with students.

Leadership from the Office . . .

Mrs. Stevens, another of Fairfield's three guidance counselors tells parents of their children's progress and helps Spartans with programs for the next year.

Mrs. Lake and Mrs. Harvill are the school's two secretaries. They do the unrewarded jobs of typing and filing that are seldom told of when listing the things that keep Spartanland together.

Mrs. Stevens, deep in a discussion on the telephone.

Mrs. Lake looks up some information in the filing cabinet.

Mrs. Harvill writes passes for late students.

Mrs. Pinkerton works hard at her desk.

Mrs. Pinkerton performs a number of endless tasks, such as taking and keeping track of the attendance while also collecting absentee slips. If you're hunting for her though, you'll probably find her in the study-hall, where she spends the most of her time.

Custodians keep Fairfield "spic and span".

Fairfield's cooks keep many a hungry Spartan going strong, with their yummy food. While, our custodians keep the building in one beautiful, clean shape.

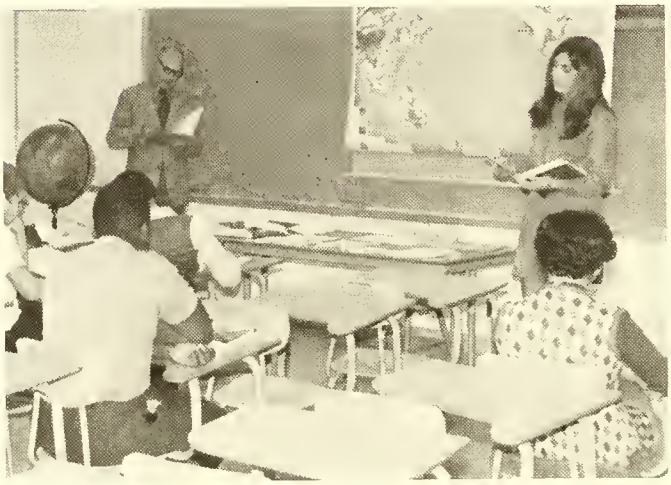
ACTIVITIES

Spartans apply the knowledge of Citizenship taught by Mrs. Betty Stein. Being studious, betters every Spartan, and advances him on toward the life ahead. All Spartans look forward, to applying the knowledge of Citizenship.



Miss Haumbarger assists Mr. Donlan, in Social Studies.

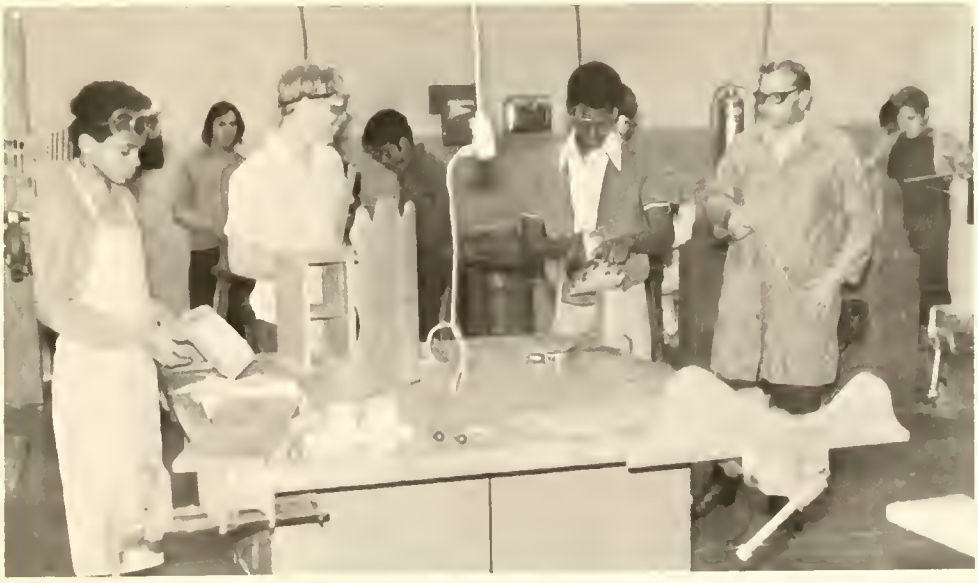
What more can Spartans ask than to be taught how life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness applies to them. "Democracy," and "We the People," appears to be the American Way of Life.

Applications of Better Citizenship . . .

As many Spartans know, "America is a melting pot." Each and every Spartan is different, as with the school system. It is established to better the American child. There will be some subjects of interest to some people, and others to other people. Industrial Arts, as with many other subjects, prepares the student for the working world.

Art students express their thoughts and opinions through their paintings and drawing. Many will move on and use their artistic abilities later in the world.

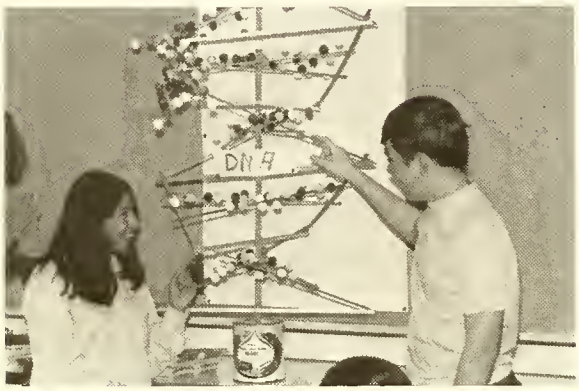
Home Economics prepares both the young men and women for the task of the future. Man or woman, each must have knowledge of the home.



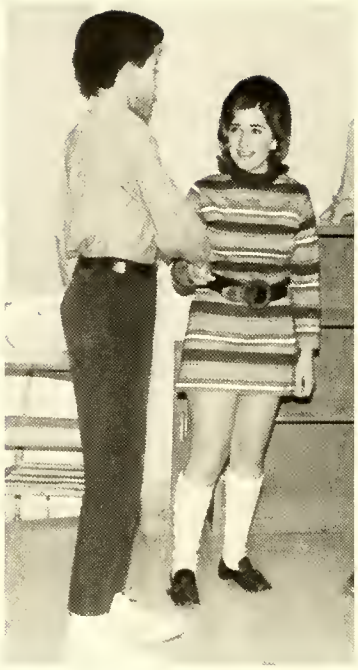
Mr. Kuntz proceeds to instruct his studious pupils.

Spartans Work Toward Their Future

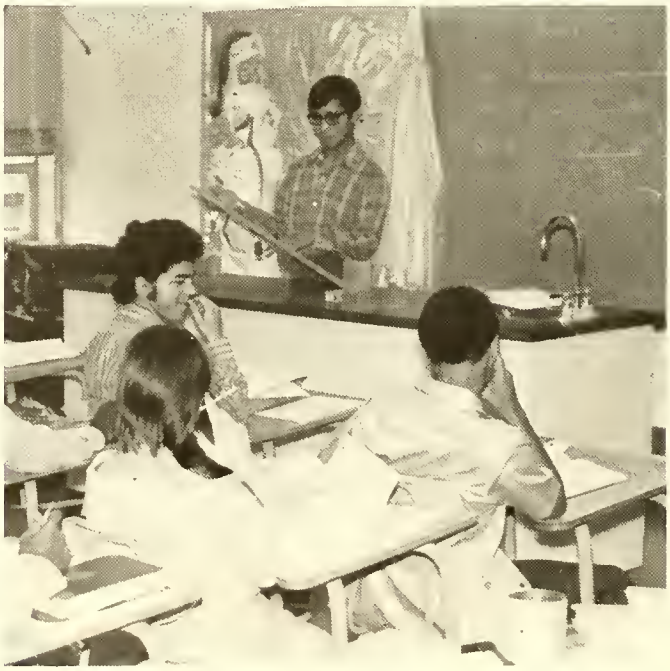
French, spoken by people of many different nationalities, is the language of romance. Students at Fairfield learn it early in life so that they may have many years and chances to use it.



In Biology classes study things from atoms to cells in the human body.

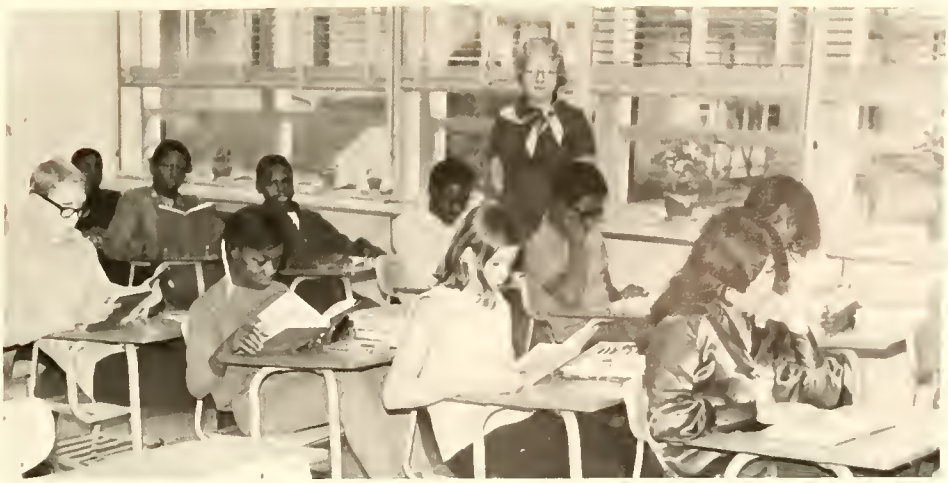


Spartans wonderingly learn of Science.



Spartans practice French customs while studying the language.

Students explore the unknown mysteries of the human mind and body. Then they move on to discover animals, plants and all other living things, while, also learning of the world around them. Such things as air and water pollution are topics of discussion in Spartan classes.



Seventh graders learn the importance of reading in Developmental Reading.

Spartans Learn Basics of Language

Students realize the fun and greatness of the English language.

Seventh graders are amazed with the speed skills they possess in learning the basics of reading. These basic skills help them in later classes and high life.

Language Arts prepares Spartans for the future by teaching them the necessities of spelling, literature, and grammar that will aid them in getting ahead and being better citizens of the world.

Numbers Fascinate Spartans . . .

Mrs. Roberts Algebra class studies facts and fiction of math.

The Special Education class works hard under the guidance of Mrs. Getsie.

Fairfield math classes explore the world of math with Mrs. Roberts and Mr. Singh. Mr. Singh, a Fullbright Scholar from India, is teaching here for one year.

7th graders move on to harder mathematics.

Swing choir practices "swinging" under the direction of Mr. Haigh.

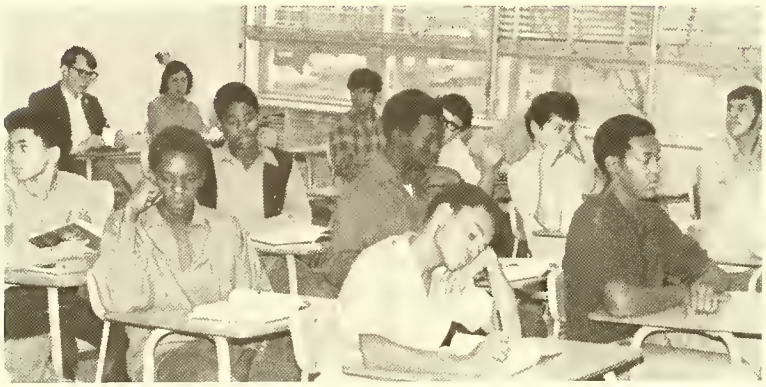
The swing choir is a group of a dozen, who sing popular tunes. Among other things, they Christmas caroled at the Veteran's Hospital.

The varsity choir enjoys singing many different types of music. This group of 8th and 9th graders held a bake sale and a paper drive to pay for a trip to Columbia City where they competed against other junior high schools.

Students of music classes enjoy discovering the mysteries of sound. They listen to everything from Bach and Mozart to The Beatles and The Jackson Five.

The varsity choir warms up for a rehearsal.

Spartans Learn of Physical Fitness



Health and Gym play a vital role in our everyday lives by helping us to stay physically fit.

In health class Spartans broaden their understanding of the human body and how it functions. Spartans prepares for safety and welfare, by listening and understanding the daily work of Health.

Exercise is a fundamental of girls' gym class.

Spartans enjoy the fundamentals of physical education. Whether in the boys gym with the muscular routines or the girls gym with the more feminine attire. P.E. is one of the daily enjoyed activities.

Students participate in a game of basketball in physical education class.

Faculty Invades Athletics

Sports! It's the thrill of exciting action, the rooting and screaming of crowds, the joy of being victorious and the pain of admitting defeat that makes the world go 'round. Here at Spartanland, school begins with cross-country and football in the fall, travels to basketball, winter and snow, then finishes up in the spring with a bang and track and field.

Spectators root for their favorite team. What team? Why, the Spartan team, of course.

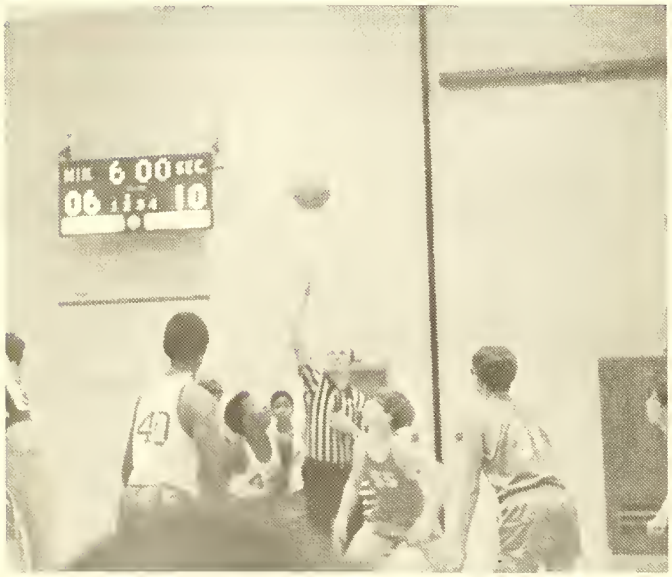
We had a highly successful football season this year with each Spartan team tackling their opponents to bring us many victories. Neither rain nor muddy fields could bring us down.

Spartans showed off their terrific skill this bright spring in track and field by running many miles and jumping high to set new records, even in damp weather. This ended sports at Fairfield, but, now let us hear of what came in between.

Cheerleaders lead the crowds in chanting our teams onwards to victory.

The 8th grade basketball team huddles together, with their coach, Mr. Flynn, for some last minute tips.

Basketball Predominates as . . .



Jump up Micheal, jump up high. Tip it to a Spartan guy.

Basketball, the game where anything possible can happen. The 8th grade team used the knowledge and skill they'd learned last year to gain more winnings then ever and end up with a great all-round record.

The 7th grade team, though the newest arrivals here at Fairfield, learned quickly and accomplished much in one year. Mr. Eldrige and Mr. Flynn together coached this fine team.

Number 1 Sport

The 9th grade team wound up their last year at Fairfield with a smashing ending score, with helpful coaching from Mr. Eldrige. Most important, it should be noted that the freshmen team defeated the teachers in the annual varsity v.s. faculty game. Well alright, now. We congratulate the coaches and teams for this fantastic year of playing they honored us with.

The 8th grade cheerleaders this year were Jackie Fowlkes, Dana Bromelmeier, Sahida Abdool, Debbie York and Nanvy Howard.

Beat 'em. Right on, Spartans.

Cheerleaders Do Their "Own Thing"

While the teams were out on the floor playing hard, right there behind them all the time were the Spartan cheerleaders, backing them on to victory. Win or lose, they were there keeping the spectators spirits up and letting themselves be heard.

The 9th grade cheerleaders were Brenda Carroll, Edna Hamilton, Brenda Williams, Henrietta Walker, Nyletta Belote and Cheryl Boling.

ACTIVITIES . . .

Student Council, composed of elected representatives, discusses the thoughts and opinions of students. They also sponsor different activities throughout the year like, decorating the Christmas tree.

Organized Student Groups Assist Administration

Booster Club, sponsored by Mrs. Long and Mr. Rodey, lend an aiding hand.

Members journey through time by reading!

Through communication and learning, these young Spartans venture on toward higher goals. Whether reading for pleasure or for reference, Spartans still explore the pages of interest. Communication through reading is comprehension through the after hours of leisure time. One way to travel, is to journey through the pages of time, space and exploration. This is a sole purpose of the "Teenage Book Club."

Fine Activities for Spartans . . .

Many happy hours are spent by game club members.

Fun and laughter are spent through after hours of entertainment. Members of the Game Club, and the Bowling Club voyage through dull days with games, sports and other activities designed for these clubs.

Mrs. Pratt and Mrs. Tyler sponsor the Embroidery and Knitting Club.

Y-teen girls meet to plan more interesting things to do.

Spartanettes learn and practice the art of embroidery and knitting, which provides an outlet for talent that produces fashionable clothing. In Y-teens future women of America plan places to go, things to do and, so, "get involved". Mrs. Roberts sponsors this club.

These students spend time before and after school and during free periods helping the librarians.

Instructional Materials Aid Students

The Audial Visual club takes care of the films and projectors.

Fairfield has a large library and is very proud of it. Students make good use of all the material available, such as the books and magazines for reference work and pleasure reading.

The A.V. Club runs the projectors for teachers if they need help, while, also keeping them in great shape and repair.

The energetic staff "buzzes" around to find news to report in The Falcon.

The Falcon, Fairfield's newspaper is published each month by the Spartan staff to inform of the events that are happening around the school.

It's done and believe it or not the entire staff survived the ordeal of putting out The Voyager, Fairfield's yearbook. It took a lot of effort, including a room full of pencils and erasers.

Publication Staff Has Fruitful Year

Mrs. Moore, The Voyage sponsor; Harlean Johnson and Diana Manlove, the co-editors; along with the staff worked hard to produce this book of remeniscences.

General Business is a course for the advancement of those Spartans who wish to journey ahead in business. In Mr. Flynn's class Spartans learn the major transaction of the General Business Course. Many students learn to enjoy the task of learning about business, to apply to the future.

World of Business Incites Spartans!

Typing class types on while Mr. Flynn talks. Spartans learn the basics of typing which will come in handy in later life. "OOPS, Don't peak! It's the memory of the keyboard you must go by and not the look."

Fond, Fond Memories . . .

Oh, How Sweet!!!
